Feedback

We, firstly, decided upon who would peer assess whose work. This was done carefully to ensure that each member assessed at least 2 other members and equally received 2 assessments for their own draft report. Once each member received their peer assessments, we held a brief discussion regarding each of our assessments where we clarified our doubts and discussed methods to improve our reports with the group. We tried to keep the feedback as detailed as possible so it helps our peers, not only understand the problem but how they can counter it and improve their report for the final submission. All 7 members found the peer assessment useful, and we were glad we could help each other with our individual reports before the submission. Some of the feedback included identifying grammatical errors, referencing errors etc. The peer assessment really helped our members understand mistakes that they would not have even noticed and the peer assessment helps us enrich the quality of our reports which could help us receive a higher grade.

Groupwork

We had settled upon two means of communication: Zoom and WhatsApp. Our coordinators tried their best to set deadlines for us to submit our work and have done an amazing job at helping us maintain a proper, organized flow of work. All other members have followed the guidelines set up by the coordinators and have all been friendly and helpful. We had a last-minute addition to our group, Muhammed Musa, which added an extra challenge for us as we had to get him up to the point we had reached but the group helped him out with his report while also providing him with sufficient time to work on his peer assessment of other members.
